6.2 Meetings

During 2007-08, LEF was closely involved in four academic meetings that, and three of these involved dialogue with groups representing different traditions of enquiry (a healthy sign that LE is developing its external profile and that it continues to look outwards). The events were:

6.2.1 Negotiating Multilingual Identities in Educational Settings (BAAL Annual Meeting, University of Edinburgh, 6th September 2007. Organiser, Adrian Blackledge). This colloquium presented four ethnographic studies, each of which investigated identity negotiation of multilingual learners in educational settings. 'Erosion of language-ideological based pupils' identities in a Dutch multicultural primary classroom' (Massimiliano Spotti & Sjaak Kroon); 'Multilingual identities in higher education: Negotiating the 'mother tongue', 'posh' and 'slang'' (Siân Preece); 'Multilingual children negotiating complex identities in ideological worlds' (Adrian Blackledge, Shahela Hamid, Li Wei, and Chao-Jung Wu); "'I can come to the meetings but can I join the club?'" Experiences of bilingual students in vocational classrooms in an English FE college' (Barbara Majer)

6.2.2 Linguistic ethnography and Socio-Cultural Psychology in conversation: A workshop on educational dialogue and classroom interaction, jointly sponsored by the ESRC-RDI 'Ethnography Language & Communication' Research Training Programme and the Open University. Open University, 16 February 2008. Organisers: Adam Lefstein, Janet Maybin and Ben Rampton). This workshop sought to foster the dialogue between LE and SCP. There were c. 40 participants, and presentations, discussions and responses were led by Neil Mercer (Cambridge), Christine Howe (Cambridge), Adam Lefstein (IoE), Ben Rampton (King's College London), Janet Maybin (OU), and Kris Gutiérrez (UCLA).

Organised by Kate Pahl, Rosie Flewitt and Lesley Lancaster. The questions addressed at this seminar included: (1) How can research methodologies be enhanced by combining multimodal and ethnographic approaches?; (2) How does a focus on the affordances of different modalities usefully extend and enhance the 'thick description' demanded by fine-grained ethnography? (3) How does incorporating visual/material cultural methodologies enhance ethnographic research? There were presentations and discussions led by Kate Pahl (Sheffield), Lesley Lancaster (Manchester Metropolitan), Sarah Pink (Loughborough), Alison Clark (Roehampton), Rachel Hurdley (Cardiff), and Rosie Flewitt (OU), Jennifer Rowsell (Rutgers).

6.2.4 Ethnographies of literacy/ Ethnographies de l'écrit : An Anglo-French Dialogue. Organised by the Literacy Research Centre, Lancaster University, and co-sponsored by UK LEF. Lancaster. 8 May 2008). 7. BAAL

LEF has developed well over the year, strengthening its institutional base and engaging with new and different constituencies. As ever, our identity as a BAAL Special Interest Group continues to be of considerable value, and we would like to thank the BAAL Executive for its ongoing support.
